Event Honors Those Committed To Health Of Region

The Cheshire Health Foundation is pleased to recognize the contributions these individuals have made to the people and nonprofit organizations in the Monadnock Region. Art Simington, MD, always believed that his job as a pediatrician was first and foremost to be a teacher – to his young patients, to their families, and to other doctors at Cheshire Medical Center/

Dartmouth Hitchcock-Keene and other institutions. After retiring from 28 years at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Keene, Simington's service of teaching did not end. He continued to inspire new generations of doctors as an Adjunct Professor of Pediatrics at Dartmouth Medical School. In addition to his work in the clinic and hospital, Simington has served the area in several community health organizations, the UCC Church in Keene, and the Historical Society of Cheshire County. Maich Gardner and Ed Tomey have devoted much of their lives, professionally and as volunteers, to the nonprofit communities where they live, supporting vulnerable children, families, and the elderly. They moved to the Monadnock Region in the late 1970s, joined the faculty at Antioch University, and worked with a multitude of regional and state-wide nonprofits. In 2000, Cheshire Medical Center reached out to Gardner and asked her to help create a doula program for the birth center. She managed the volunteer program to assist birthing mothers and personally attended births too numerous to count. She retired in 2010, and her work lives on.

Upon stepping down as Chair of Antioch's Management Department, Tomey helped the NH Charitable Foundation establish The Corporate Fund. For 16 years, he and Gardner partnered to review more than 1,000 proposals from nonprofits seeking funds to strengthen their management and governance. Tomey, meanwhile, consulted to some 150 nonprofits, including the Clinic and Medical Center, Monadnock Family Services, and the Endowment for Health. Today, they continue to volunteer, leaving lasting impressions on nonprofits and their clients. This dinner, hosted at the Keene Country Club, features special presentations recognizing the dedication and contributions these outstanding citizens have made to the community. Tickets for the event are available for $100 per person online at www.cheshirehealthfoundation.org/tribute. Sponsorships and donations in celebration of the honorees are also available. For more details, see the website or call Jim Boden at 603-354-6810. Proceeds from the event benefit the Cheshire Health Foundation.
